Case M2: It is well known that the Morilla family runs the Guild of Wonders, Absalom's most prestigious espionage and assassination organization. What is less well known is that the Aspis Consortium, a Chelish band of fortune-hunters, hired the Guild of Wonders many times to spy on the Pathfinder Society and the Blakros family. I successfully created a diversion for the servant's attention, and was able to make copies of several documents that prove that Lady Annasendra personally oversaw contracts to assassinate members of the Pathfinder Society. If the number of events I am invited to is any indication, they haven't caught on yet, but I'm afraid to dig deeper in to this situation.

Case N4: After hours of searching and days of asking subtle questions, I've turned up absolutely nothing of interest. Surely people this boring must be hiding something.

Case L3: The servant in charge of the kitchens has a penchant for gossip.

Information Broker: I read in a diary that that an information broker lives in Absalom named Torch. I hear he's well worth his coin, but is not to be trusted, because he'll sell information to anyone.

Case Maldris 8: To my shame I have learned that my own father, Merrin, is a charlatan who used the chaos of the Andoran's People's Revolt to change his name from Vanoecker. I later learned that the Vanoeckers were an Andoren noble family with a tyrannical reputation. The worst part was that I discovered that my brother knew about this all along. So much for his glorious, egalitarian ideals and Andoren purity. We're just as guilty as the rest of them! Colson!
How Could You!

Case J3: There's some big ceremony coming up at the temple of Asmodeus in a few months. People were muttering about a great fire to honor him, but I couldn't hear many details. I can't shake the thought that those devil bootlickers are planning to burn slaves in that pyre. I must investigate further.

Saw this
When I Investigated!
What does it mean?

Case M7: In process, expect updates after Stilonius's birthday party.

Case D4: Lady Miranda Dacilane is rumored to have committed numerous amorous indiscretions during her youth. The most outrageous was that she was the mistress of Orias Deckland, a scandalous member of Absalom's upper classes, and bore him a child. She is also rumored to have belonged to a secret society known as the Harbingers of Fate. Rumors come from a drunken but reliable source.

Case A1: Badru let slip that his sister is heading to Osirion to participate in a secretive excavation of a tomb from the time of the Pharaoh of Forgotten Plagues.
